

About Our Ads

We use common tracking technologies.

We collect personal information about users over time and across different websites when you use this website or service. We also have third parties that collect personal information this way. To do this, we use several common tracking tools. Our vendors may also use these tools. In this policy “we” and “us” refers to both us and our vendors. These may include browser cookies. We may also use web beacons, flash cookies, and similar technologies.

We use tracking technologies for a variety of reasons.

We use tracking tools:

- To recognize new or past customers.
 - To store your password if you are registered on our site.
 - To improve our website and to better understand your visits on our platforms.
 - To integrate with third party social media websites.
 - To serve you with interest-based or targeted advertising (see below for more on interest-based advertising).
 - To observe behaviors and browsing activities over time across multiple websites or other platforms.
 - To better understand the interests of our customers and our website visitors.
-

We engage in interest-based advertising.

We and our partners display interest-based advertising using information gathered over time across multiple websites or other platforms. This might include apps.

Interest-based advertising or “online behavioral advertising” includes ads served to you after you leave our website, encouraging you to return. They also include ads we think are relevant based on browsing habits or online activities. These ads might be served on websites or on apps. They might also be served in emails. We might serve these ads, or third parties may serve ads. They might be about our services or other companies’ services or products.

How do we gather relevant information about you for interest-based advertising?

To decide what is relevant to you, we use information you make available to us when you interact with us, our affiliates, and other third parties. We gather this information using the tracking tools described above. For example, we or our partners might receive information about purchases or browsing behaviors. We or our partners might also collect location information. We might receive information about these activities on our platforms or the platforms of others.

We work with third parties who help gather this information. These third parties might link your name or email address to other information they collect. That might include past purchases made offline or online.

You can control certain tracking tools.

Your browser may give you the ability to control cookies. How you do so depends on the type of cookie. Certain browsers can be set to reject browser cookies. To control flash cookies, which we may use on certain websites from time to time, you can go here. Why? Because flash cookies cannot be controlled through your browser settings.

Do Not Track Policy: Some browsers have “do not track” features that allow you to tell a website not to track you. Unfortunately, these features are not all uniform and any notices or signals from these browsers may not work effectively to stop interest based advertising. As a result, we do not take any particular action from browsers based on these notices or signals. If you block cookies, certain features on our sites may not work. If you block or reject cookies, not all of the tracking described here may stop.

Certain options you select are browser and device specific.

You can opt-out of online behavioral advertising.

The Self-Regulatory Program for Online Behavioral Advertising provides consumers with the ability to opt-out of having their online behavior recorded and used for advertising purposes. To opt out of having your online behavior collected for advertising purposes, click here.

Certain choices you make are both browser and device-specific.